Anti-bias education helps young children become aware of and take action against bias. It does this by offering age-appropriate opportunities for children to develop self-awareness and awareness of the bias embedded in the culture around them. A well-designed anti-bias education program can help young children move from seeing bias in individuals to being able to recognize bias in the context of systems, institutions and group structures. In this context, children understand the fact that bias affects them, and can help mitigate its effects.
