The launch of the Capital Crescent Trail in 2010 and a revival in housing development promises a new age in rail transit in the capital city. These new developments would make it much easier for people to use rail transit in DC. On the other hand, the Metro continues to face problems. A daycare center in Rosslyn threatened to derail the opening of the Silver Line because of concerns over safety and noise. Among the group of major polluters, the companies’ capital, employees and consumers are the sources of significant pollution, and, in some cases, the magnitude of their operations are a clear indication of how serious the threats of climate change are to the environment and public health. The top polluters are: Exxon Mobil (up from #2 last year), the largest oil company in the world, with an estimated $270 3e33713323
