Risks of low birth weight in extremely preterm and late preterm infants: a cohort study. Although low birth weight (LBW) is an important risk factor for impaired neurodevelopment in preterm infants, little information is available on the risks for LBW in extremely preterm (EP) and late preterm (LPT) infants. The current study analyzed the risks of LBW in early and late neonatal period for infants born at 26-31 weeks of gestation and the effect of LBW on neurodevelopmental outcomes at 12-15 months after discharge in the EP and LPT groups in Japan. We performed a retrospective cohort study including infants delivered between January 2011 and December 2015 at participating hospitals in Japan. Neonatal data, including birth weight, maternal data, and neonatal treatment and its complications, were collected. A total of 1,358 (EP: n=1,193; LPT: n=265) infants were included in the study. The overall incidence of LBW in infants born at 26-31 weeks of gestation was 40.6% (559/1,358). Of 559 LBW infants, 192 (34.3%) were EP and 367 (65.7%) were LPT. LBW infants were significantly more likely to have severe neonatal morbidities and the risk of LBW was significantly increased in the presence of severe neonatal morbidities. Logistic regression analysis indicated that odds ratios of LBW in EP and LPT infants were 1.35 (95% CI: 1.03-1.76, p=0.029) and 1.62 (95% CI: 1.11-2.35, p=0.012), respectively. LBW in EP and LPT infants was associated with impaired neurodevelopmental outcomes. These findings suggest that LB
